Description:

This database is a collection of historical parish and probate registers from the county of Gloucestershire. Records in this collection can range in date from the early 1500s to the mid- to late-1800s. Some non-parish records are as early as the twelfth century. Parish records--primarily baptisms, marriages, and burials--provide the bulk of the records centuries before civil registration. The records include baptisms/christenings, burials, marriages, tombstone inscriptions, wills, and other miscellaneous types of records. Also included are some records from non-conformist churches that were originally presented in various published registers and books. For this reason, you will find interesting and descriptive tables of contents.

What should I know about this collection to access the data?

Some of the records may be in Latin or even a Welsh or Scottish dialect depending on location. The records were written in the original language. There are many spelling inconsistencies and non-standard grammar. Phonetic spelling is used in some records. Search yields no results.

The individual files in this database may not include all dates and records for each parish/church. Use the complete set of records--even for the parishes and time period listed. Due to the legibility of the original records, including partial sentences, cut-off words, and other omissions.

Due to the nature of the records and because the records were originally compiled by a third party, it is not possible to guarantee the completeness and validity of the data. The information in this collection is as correct as it was when it was first reproduced in an electronic format.

What historical background should I know to use this data?

A large number of parish records date from the sixteenth century, when a series of mandates required parishes to keep records of baptisms, marriages, and burials within the parish, and to send an annual copy to the Bishop. Essentially, there was a requirement for the copy the clergyman sent to the Bishop each year, known as Bishops Transcripts. Many records were destroyed during the Civil War (1642-1660). Of the surviving records, many have since been transcribed and copied. These records are a valuable resource for finding vital information of people of the time. The content of the records is often very detailed.

Civil registration of births, deaths, and marriage, often called General Registration, began in July of 1837. This index that simplifies searches and includes people who may not have been associated with a church. 7 than parish records (parish records after 1837 often aren't filmed) and are easier to use. But many birth and civil registration, so parish records are still extremely valuable.

How do I find copies of the originals?

These records are a finding aid that help researchers locate an ancestor in a particular time and place. If an approximate date, the microfilm number of pertinent corroborating records can often be found on the website (www.familysearch.org) in the Family History Library Catalog. The Family History Library in Salt Lake City

For unfilmed original parish records go to The Phillimore Atlas and Index of Parish Registers, under you the County Record Office where the registers are housed. You can also contact local genealogy societies for viewing original records. See Crockford's Clerical Directory, a directory of Church of England clergy published annually.

There are other church records, and a search on Familysearch.org on the FHLC can provide you with a locality search for your county/parish, then look under "Church Record" type.
